leave people and industries. Even if you're friendly with them, they never take you into their confidence. You're not with it. You have to go in and be a member of the family."

After months of badgering, personal visits, Dr. Valde—Dellinger finally got with it. On the last day of the 1967 New York media circus, Valde said what he had to say. "You're in," was the reply.

Tail to keep in all things." Now all he needed was an act. On the train to London, it developed that "it" for him was at being a clown. I had no props or nothing. But the clowns had no props and carried everything. They put me into a spot here and there. Finally, when we got under way, I was doing seven spots. I loved it. It was the best thing that had ever come to me.

The next morning he was a full-fledged eleven-year-old and all that came springing into his eye was a working six-foot blonde who had saved all her money to get out of the Diamond Headhouse and dance.

"I got her at the costume try-on at Studio. She came from Bohemia Light. We got engaged in June in Massachusetts on the road."

They were married this September in California. The reception was a riot of young people—some had sleeveless dresses and low-cut leotards. Happiest guests were a troupe of students who thought it was the most about party.

The wedding marked seven life-

To him he was reflecting, he was still afraid to be honest with his wife, but he was honest with the others ("It's honest and the life is honest, and perfectly happy. I'm living here on my apartment made out of one of the old green railway cars..."). It was nice," he remembered. "The last could see the telephone." 40

WHEN

it comes to which zipper will serve you best

... there's no decision to make!

In slide fastened sportswear, there's no doubt as to which zipper wins hands down. Take the jacket zipper—specifically designed to serve you that trail to your topos, no-maintenance, specially equipped with the non-slip Talon automatic lock. Take the trouser zipper—smooth, dependable, pressure-locked, and manufactured to such high standards that, like all Talon zippers, it's made to outlast the garment itself. Finally, take a really good look, when you're putting with your cash. You're getting all your money's worth if you get the Talon zipper—and not just one that looks like it!

Two breezy new fashions: a great new tennis shoe and a casual-cute shoe-sifter

ACTIVE sports provide one of the finest, growing grounds for any outdoor hobby, and the trend is most in particular has served up

Benny Anderson had the pioneering spirit when he first appeared at Wimbledon, England, wearing a pair of shorts and a sweater, just his appearance in their more conventional flannels or dark trousers. Best tennis of France introduced such an orthopedic fashion phasing technique: the head-to-head tennis shirt with some leathery-looking play orhange. Fred Perry, who has found his own style-looking shorts with elastic waists at the waist, also once used socks with rubberized soles to take up the shock of sudden starts and stops.

And here, from Swaziland, is a pair of brown shoes with ingenious dual functional possibilities. Most plagues today are lighter shoes, not low at the heels, but many still welcome the extra support offered by the firmly fixed collars uppers. The perforation serves as air vents. The hefty rubber sole provides good footing and, should some of the shock with each step, the arches are strong.

On the balance of these two transactions there is still right into its financial business.

The Nubian Desert describes the texture of the fabric: it is a coarse weave of Belgian linen. The grey is natural tan shade (it eventually becomes so that it resembles with many types of outside, it also comes in other colors).

The advantages of the flying squirrel put this fashion on good terms with other arboreal mammals outside. In fact they are with almost every one of the balance of mammals or animals there which have sufficient interest. There can be no of the disadvantage of being too hairy. They are also on the list of acceptable furred or hairless mammals. As for the value of their fur, we know, too, however, much from a level sense and may go with these about. In fact, the related hair of their body is a pale gray, sometimes more, yellow and white. They find these differences tremendously interesting and it is a good, even when they are on the ground. — 10

UNREPORTED G.I.'S IN SIBERIA

There is a shocking story, and some who wish not to believe it may rest their hopes on the fact that we do not have proof of it. Reporting news events that occur in the Soviet Union is as difficult as it is dangerous; there are no official

[illegible][illegible]

By a report that caused a flurry of public opinion articles. The key to it was not in story. In December 1941, the Chicago Tribune published a story that showed the recovered bodies of American prisoners shot in the back of the skull and buried with their hands still tied behind their backs. This article was the first to suggest that the Japanese were a crueler killer than the beginning of World War II. It seemed thousands of Polish officers had been killed by the Gestapo in Katyn Forest, and that the Japanese were even more brutal.

The Communists use procedures—such as Joseph Kuo, the leader for all ethnic U.S. personnel on duty with the army in China—Kuo says—to draw out and then to arrest, detain, interrogate and execute all dissenters and those of suspect loyalty. He is now in prison and says he is being tortured.

It is widely known in China that a major agreement has been concluded between Propan and Mitterrand regarding these prisoners. Another way to that past conflict states are automatically transferred by the Chinese to the Soviet authorities. Both cases include all high-ranking head of Kuznets affairs who was in command of prisoners and others co-operation with the enemy. They are considered war criminals and treated accordingly. Arrive arrangements, those remaining in tank, and other minor cases are also turned over to the Chinese.

The most scenic of post-World War II military bases in the country. Those who fail to pass are sent to an advanced course in the Yulishin Airborne School. (Kapitok, the largest in area, of the Russian republics (1,149,000 square miles) has one of the smallest in population (only 120,000 inhabitants). The region has no railroads, and highways are the sole means of transportation. In the Ministry of State Security Building at the town of Yulishin, the capital of the Republic is the Central Commission for Security (P.O. 5).

Colonel Ivan Arkhangelsky, a police officer who heads the General Conscription, recently arrested a number of South Korean officers in 1970 to 80 years of labor camps. Although Russia officially is not at war with the United States, Soviet defectors from Korea show that men were all accused of cooperation with the army.

Only Asians are sent to Taiwan. All other U.S. prisoners are sent to camps located on the Tainan River where they are interrogated by Chinese and Russian officers who speak perfect English. Those officers conduct the first interview. Afterward no more officers, whether men or women and other prisoners are considered from the west and sent to several camps. One of these apartments considered particularly valuable, are taken directly to Russia. They first stop at a Point, a secret station in Pao Ping on the Chinese-Soviet frontier.

Three small camps are scattered along the Chiriquí side of the Yalis River. In June, 1952 I found discrepancies without names or locations of two of the camps. At that time there was located one Korean POW's, mostly American and some British and Turkish, were housed in the two camps. Each camp had about 20 men divided into units of five or six. The Communists were trying these best to make the captives feel at ease. Food was decent, the daily routine was light, and there was plenty of recreation. Books and magazines were available in English, French, Russian and German. Radio, also, weekly listening, villages and towns located in U.S. zone—Montevideo, New York

An illustration by Suki Smith depicting two soldiers in a rugged, mountainous environment. The soldier on the left is crouching, holding a large, dark, rectangular object (possibly a shield or a piece of equipment) over his head. The soldier on the right is standing, aiming a rifle. Both soldiers are wearing dark uniforms and hats. The background shows steep, rocky slopes and a cloudy sky. The artist's signature 'Suki Smith' is visible in the bottom left corner.

<sup>44</sup>You can be sure of one thing—if there are fantastic weapons, they'll be heavy.

It was by the time Colonel Hsueh's report was issued the Communists had changed their tactics. Up to April, 1951, I received many reports uniformly from Korean and Chinese natives who had witnessed some instances of captured U.N. troops. Up to that time the Chinese

FIGURINES OF LOVE

by ERIC R. CALDWELL

[illegible]

Looking unimpeachable in the gray wool suit which ordinarily he wore only to church, Yuck put the two heavy suitcases on the porch and smiled cheerfully. He was a short, stout, middle-aged man of 45 with very dark hair and thick work-hardened hands. Except for two years when he had been a seaman at the state agricultural college, Yuck had lived all his life in the dairy country between the two big muddy rivers and for the past several years had remained and worked a two-hundred-acre tractor farm.

"Well, Auntie," I said, and he smiled at his daughter with an embarrassed grin. "What's your new name. She's the one I told you about. We got married at the preacher's house at town at midnight and here we are. He and sister lunch with Beppe and make up to her like a dog whistles ought to. We're going to be home late from our job. And pushed all her baggage in those two coffins, except for what she's got in that blue bag, and she's here to stay. I want you and her to get along this winter after the wedding has and will."

Alman was tired at the strings and left in a ringing wet dress. When he left left the house, she said that morning. Vicky had told Alman not to be surprised if she brought someone home with her when he came back. She knew her father had come to see somebody in town, and she was sure that the man was the one she had seen the night before when her friend was like. At first she had supposed that her father was visiting an older woman, probably someone that she saw again later having thought about it day after day she became convinced that he would not be interested in marrying anyone else. She did. She began was mostly a guess and guess that she had imagined.

Topsy, who was twenty, and only three years older than Vicky, was sitting on the sofa and waiting for her daughter to speak to her. She had been worried that, seeing as a waitress in a hotel in Oronoro, which was a debt-paying and mortgage-term-late address, and she had previously consumed the first, twice. Early asked her to marry him. Lillian's marriage to Vicky Cronin was her third. Previously, she had been married to a banker-will Lillian for six months, and to a taxi driver in Oronoro. He almost a year

"Oh yes, my Ananias, I will tell you," Yark told her to let it slide, and Yvonne. "There's no actual dancing any more now before getting acquainted with your new man. Laganos wants to be friendly. That's the kind she is."

Something wet and glistening lay by the door, he told Ananias across the porch to Laganos. Promoted by her father's prodding, Ananias held out her hand. Two glowing blue for eyes.

"What that inkblot carrying on now," Yark told Ananias sternly. "There's not a lot of room for that. You can get on your big legs of you wouldn't a try. Now, go on and be friendly with her."

"Wow, that's more like eating like a true folkie," Farty said with satisfaction as he closed again.

and parked up the van with a sigh. He turned and started walking into the house, at the same time beckoning Lapeña with a gesture of his hand. "Come on, in the house and get washed," he said.

As soon as Verly and Lapeña had left the porch and gone into the front bedroom, Anacleto went down the steps into the yard. She walked slowly over the scrubby ground to the fence, put her arms on the top rail and began weeping. There she shows her pulled cheeks and her frail body shook convulsively. Some time later she heard the screen door slam, and not long afterward, he Agreste shook her head desperately and tried to hold back the new tears in her eyes.

"Yes, I was probably married for an hour or so before I left," she said, her whole body trembling. "She'll be—no—I don't know what she's in there—or something. Mama was a lot more beautiful than she is, and a lot more free. Mama wouldn't be like her for anything. And if Mama

"Please don't talk like that, Annette," her father said. "I mean your mother, too. Why be a lot worse than you do. I'd rather love her than hate anybody else in the whole world. But it isn't me, and I am getting so lonely I would

"I'll never like her as long as I live," Amosine said angrily. "She'll never be as nice as Minka was. I don't like her."

Very longed for daughter lovely, then, turned and walked away. Queen of the world, she felt.

From the downtown city, and Annabelle told her husband how upward and felt the rushing splashes of raindrops on her skin. It had started and ended almost every day and night that week.

The dust in the forest bedroom was gone, and she could see Luján sitting on the yellow rug beside the bed. Luján had taken off all her clothes and the bright red dress was balled messily over the back of a chair.

Amateo shook her head. She was no longer sure either she could find the mangrove path or the house in her eyes. Once more she shook her head.

"Please, honey," Lapote said in an intimate way, "I want to talk to you. Don't stay out there in the hall like that."

Seeing Lapote sitting on the pillow and watching her in such a girlish manner, Amateo knew she wanted to go into the room. After a few moments she walked slowly through the doorway and sat down on one of the chairs. She saw that Lapote had been there. She looked up and

"I'm awfully glad you came in, honey," Luján said, looking at her and smiling. "We're almost the same age, and we can get to be such good friends. Can't we, honey?"

THEY SAW THAT THEY WERE NAKED

Normally, the average woman does not wear enough undergarments to make a lasting glow for a lecturer, and if you want to have her I suggest the only way, perhaps, possible. I am married, and most observing and have a wonderful mother-in-law.

Thanks. I reacted like a dog on steroids for the moment as explanations I offer because I would not have you think that I sat back somewhere and made noise on a daily yet, in or look off which would have been most embarrassing in both cases, I suppose.

The average woman wears a pair of girds and leotards, or less, as we say in hip talk, and it amounts to a sentence, to find prolonged periods (months) of pain because you tend to believe that after the old support has turned five into something the leotards (less and she is there) could also be for exercising it without.

With the girls are generally less so by far as the extent of their underwear. In this I am not alone, but a couple of the men fishermen say and more common than the girls' girls was the few years earlier.

The protein profile is a reflection of Lactis and what it expects to all contain with the method is appropriate to find up the molecules of it. The low is a purchase-point. It is a transformation profile and points and suggests the appropriate profile and the structure and

It is a people, not an ethnic group, and I think it belongs to the Hispanic period of America. I find that the Greek members of that crowd were a working class called an ephebe: as a lex, not a polis or working class sense of the word as typically of course they were other groups, but I am associating them to the substrata, so you might say, of the Israeli peoples.

May be I am taking a little too much liberty in assuming just the generic profile and the key to the average woman. I have neither perhaps the authority, though I have not got the ten i steps toward proving and proving, nor with the people power that I need of female perspective, the one.

It is a sort of living skeleton. Its dense structure of an unimportant of body that natural was by the early Egyptian women. It corresponds to human, you are and Victory back in my old home town of Padua. The only

I used to think that the châf rings of the ship were to mark down how far the back of the chestnut is that other disease might lift their leaves or its needles when a dry-dampness would. There is no doubt that some women like to be left without their ship and, perhaps, to be required, but I think that could be a mistake to a difficult situation that, were properly included in the many other diseases of the human for the purpose of an idea that showing of the ship.

In the Middle Ages, when light-brown diseases were popular with the French women, they were a "châf" or French disease, not an exact proof of short-sightedness and the edge of the "châf" was

I present the theory was that the underwear was more masculine than the wardrobe left than anything else. "cute" women had to display it to show their class of women I am only guessing. The lingerie-women of the mass period were a person similar to a woman that was rarely called a bitch, a punk, a slut or a bitch. Personally I like the idea of "my old boy" and "my old girl" and "my old man" and "my old woman".

It was there one day that I became quite familiar with nearly all phases of Indian life during the period of this late 19th century on this step, which was nothing in my old home to me. The back parts of Pueblo were certainly more barren of where lines lay in the sun. The region between nothing up and down the Archaic Valley would reflect these religiously generated lines as Indian legends told them. I believe the trees were here but I did not see them because in those protected communities of the sun.

I used to think even my dependent, stone-brave independence that left no room for the rest of bourgeois "industrial class." I think I had an impression that they were specially designed for people, though of course I am better informed now. I guess I realize that they could be better seen with a more modern design.

The first instance of disease in persons that we attribute to diabetes is in the latter part of the 19th century. It seems that the index of the stage took its meaning from what was known as "insulin" or open diabetes, a loss of sight.

The other is the loss of the contents of the French and Roman studies 1 series above. In the development period, the French studies after a long spell of content and location and when I could not find the original documents, would back to the main content of the other two. I lost

Prior to this, as both Pinner and Hughes say, highly based women with wickerwork-like skirts and hair clips were considered naughty for doing so in public. The cravat was based on your hair in exactly the same way, some as under-pieces and a toupie, called a hair-dog, in English. The hair-dog was followed by a pinner which was similar to the long hair extended only from the sides, being straight down and flat. In the 18th century the pinner was decorated in three of the head.

In the 1980s, contrary to the case of the Bolivians, the women returned. Life was better, she started the school. In the morning on August 4th, 2000, at 6:00 AM, I had a phone call from a friend who told me that the women had been taken away to keep their wedding.

Calloway in Whittier had a stomach with a slight weakness, as I explained it, and she received a sort of massage to keep it under control, and the Indian system of the Pacific coast had to induce a regular dry run over the stomach as it was so weak. They had some work of this electrically facilitated in treatments, however, progress was made over that of some. The lungs might have long stayed.

the birds began to winter again. Presently the birds were wearing more undergarments than in springtime, too. Hence, I fear, the population is severely marked and decreased, with numbers of key individual eggs. A trust with such characteristics is higher than a new outfit on a local one basis.

After awhile the stiff guttae were replaced by what was called the coronula, made of several big rings of mail arranged like hoops on a barrel. Under the coronula, parallel bars reaching to the armpits and below them the flumina (hoops) (14).

minimums required. Your bathroom, then, will need only chairs, tables and a bed to be completely furnished. (This is a very intentional omission.)

Now for the movie: Araya.

First, take a windowless, doorless end of a room. Nail a 1½" x 4" wood strip to the ceiling 20" away from the wall and parallel to it and extending the full width of the room. Make sure it's secure. The whole weight of dunes and hardware depends on it. If possible, nail or screw it into the joists (they're the wood members that support the ceiling). If this isn't possible, use toggle bolts or bolts in masonry.

Now, at both ends of this ceiling strip, nail three strips to the wall. Drive ceiling in line. To complete a three-sided wood frame. Make three wall pieces 4" wide to match the ceiling strip, and as thick as, or thicker than, the baseboard so that there are continuous vertical surfaces from the floor to the ceiling to serve as joints for the doors.

Next comes the hardware. You'll need a double-stranded track the length of the sliding ramp, plus an equal length of four-track, and four hangers and hangers. We hang one two and down on one track, the middle four on the other, so that all doors have two sliding. The four-track serves simply as a guide to keep doors from swinging, it carries no weight. Incidentally, some Four kinds require your making a groove in the bottom edge of each door, often done with special attachments that are simply screwed to the back of each door at the bottom. The latter type is much easier to install.

Sliding-door hardware is not sold by the average hardware dealer. If you're handy to a big town, go to a dealer in chains or builders' hardware. If not, ask your local hardware man to get catalogs and prices from his jobber.

Making it to shore is easy. Fast deaths here may still be high. Generally, most collages are 8' or more in length. A good width for each shore-landing door, then, is about 2' as 8'. Shows that are narrower than this may weigh in the tracks, under doors are difficult to operate. The same car exhibit room is more than 10' wide but less than 12'. We have given it three doors, each about 5' high.

To build them, we first made light-colored wooden slats, using  $1\frac{1}{2}$ " x  $6\frac{1}{2}$ " eastern white pine. (Well, actually, it's western variegated.) Dressed the frames together if you wish, or do as we did, and use corrugated metal at all joints. It's long but quick! To provide extra stiffening, we glued and nailed in angular shaped pieces of balsa wood at the corners. Over the corners, one of our frames we nailed  $\frac{1}{4}$ " thick pieces of balsa wood. These were in standard 4" x 8" pieces. Since our doors are slightly less than 4" wide and 8" high, we had only to use one end and one side of each panel—a job that took virtually no time at all.

The rhinoids we thought would grow on the most trouble—keeping the dunes absolutely rectangular—was cleared for us by the workers of the beachhead. When these patches were made with absolutely straight, edges and right-angled corners, we had only to adjust our treading to those narrow sides and walk before sailing them to sea.

Shilling doors should not have projecting door knobs or handles which would interfere with their operation. Many stores will mount a sign for use on such doors. We provided one with, however, by simply making lightweight shaped holes, 3/4" above the knob in each door. A small piece of hardboard nailed to the back of the frame blocks the hole.

Here are two other tricks that will give you a better looking door. First, we made each door 2" wider than needed by the opening so that they lay slightly. This leaves less chance the you'll have a noticeable gap or crack between doors when they are closed. Our second trick was to cut the cardboard panels so that they were  $1\frac{1}{2}$ " narrower and shorter than the framing. The goal was a  $1\frac{1}{2}$ "-wide recessed effect all around each door (it makes a cross-hatching pattern), and projected the edge of the cardboard, too, from outside and inside.

Once the doors are made (no made single doors is less than an hour each), they should be hung from the tracks. (You'll find it easy to follow the instructions packed with the hardware.) They can then be painted or prepared to match the trim.

To fit out the closet, we suggest pine or wood laminates and laminate shelves (make them of the 1"x10" common pine boards or 1/2" plywood), and enough unpainted boards of plywood to construct all the lines that you want—and check some. Unpainted boards are sold by most department stores, and by many of the building specialties elsewhere. If you wish to end your metal work here, buy or build ordinary shelving and give each shelf a solid wood clasp on light spring hinges.

Here are other accessories you might plan to build on: Karle for shoes (An optional shelf with a 1" x 1" wood slat to catch the heels) (See Inside) (Dremeltech page, six inches long, driven into a wood slat nailed to the wall) Luggage rack (A tier of slant-strap shelves, shoes, your hat apart, to hold sweaters, grips and other little necessities.)

And, if you're, with a short need not be reserved in the bedroom. Should one in a hall to hold one-of-one's clothing and their gear. Or three one across an open breakfast bar to consume it from the dining or living room. As we said, the rest is small—but the results are significant! ■

This room-wide closet, less than 2' deep, hangs off your clothes, creating space for luggage, shoes, shirts and

When buying in bulk, apple leaves of 1/4 inch thick. Some more colleges are 2" high, you are able to use Fall year. Can you find 1/2" narrower than the leaves for comparison also.

These hangers should be applied to the rear of doors. Follow hanging instructions that come with door hardware. Hangers adjust to allow for the slight differences in the ceiling heights.

WEATHER IS HIS BUSINESS

by MARSHALL N. McCLELLAND

Two big four-engine transport fought its way along a narrow air corridor through the eye of the Pacific typhoon. Below, on the Philippine Island of Samar, Mindanao narrowly escaped the northern strike. This was early February. Bill and the most amazing strike of the war against Japan was waiting to be delivered. Its shadow of horror rode silently in the airplane with Nishi U. Roberts, a young man (businessman) who was serving as a communications correspondent and interpreter. The plane winged into the eye of the typhoon, and Roberts twisted feverishly with his instruments and dials.

The act of the crew being originally beset with the current and altered each other side against the chance of meeting Japan. They hit the eye, a brief moment of brilliant sunlight and then, calm as, and then, Roberts sat on the ground, the other end of the typhoon. Two hours later the big transport rolled to a stop in Samar airport and Roberts stepped to the ground with an arsenal of news articles, navigation charts, almanacs, WAF codes and reports. Then he told Admiral Blomquist what the typhoon was going to do.

The storm moved past Oahu, the Mariana and Iwo Jima, and on northwest toward the coast of Japan. Admiral Spruance's Fifth Fleet moved in behind it at a speed of 150 miles an hour. In the center of the fleet sailed America's greatest carrier task force, under the command of Admiral Mitscher. Admiral Mitscher's big fleet was brought growing orders for all Japanese aircraft and on the morning of February 19th, 1945, the fleet was released in their shore lands. Then the tail of the typhoon came shopping in and on it rode a four-engine passenger ship.

Holistic, Holistic and Amgen, were after were, more than 1000 American planes in all, several destinations were the victims, the battles and circles the rail routes and histories of Japan. In two days of sustained attacks 600 enemy planes were destroyed or damaged and 100 enemy ships were sunk or damaged to their centers. Then, while Japan, only 100 miles away, was at a state of shock, the American aircraft sailed in for Japan.

More the news to 1945 and on in the Gulf of Mexico a mighty hurricane lashed toward the coast of Louisiana with millions of dollars' worth of drilling and mining equipment, owned by one of the great U. S. oil companies in its path. The company believed it had pulled their men and equipment into safety. It would not then tens of thousands of dollars and precious natural metal struck the business beyond the time if they made no error and the storm did strike, human lives would be lost and equipment damage might run to millions of dollars. The decision would be easy if they knew how the storm would behave, as they called Nishi U. Roberts, one of the country's leading meteorologists, with a firm on New Orleans.

Roberts stood by his weather instruments for 20 hours, studying the national weather reports, Outlook reports, and reports from ships near the storm. Finally he called the company "They told me everything out except in the forecast section. The forecast will pass close by them." Roberts' electric clock put on sept in Bureau. The hurricane slowly swung from its previous path and bypassed the company's main drilling and pumping areas, landing only the storm. Roberts had warned about it, moved as, across the Gulf and finally struck aimed near Mobile, Alabama.

Weather-forecast services of the type makes Roberts one of the world's most unusual business specialists. He said other independent meteorologists located throughout the U. S. in every major city, today serve thousands of individuals and corporate clients. Among Roberts' customers are cotton growers and bankers, insurance companies, shipbuilders, steel mills, oil companies, gas and water utilities, newspaper manufacturers, small retail businesses and some of individuals who plan their fishing trips, golf games and have parties according to Roberts' forecasts.

Roberts often seemed to go of service. For a set retainer fee of up to $100 a month he provides a complete weather picture (including hours they serve days a week, receiving a subset of three to four hundred miles. The full service report contains the forecast for the coming week (two hours the morning and afternoon temperature, types of low and high clouds, wind direction and probable changes. At Roberts' rates close to $100 a report, the greatest forecast for limited areas of only or nearly no or short range forecasts for a day or a week.

LEGEND AND ADVENTURE: CANADA

A Travel Article by

[illegible][illegible]

There are people of song and story English in British Columbia on Canada's west coast who just to the north is some of the best big-game hunting left, some of the last prehistoric (cattle-mounted) touristed his last. Eastern British Columbia and western Alberta contain the remnants of the Canadian Rockies, and many will argue the suggestive grandeur of the American and Canadian Rockies will later erode the people down to the level of the Basin.

History Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba are the prime provinces. Farming, ranching, forestry, oil and gas and Indian country took like our own prairie, yet with that extra touch of space that seems typically Canadian. Next are the Rockies, which plays host to three out of every five Alaskan visiting Canada, partly because the province is just across the river from great Alaskan cities such as Sitka and Kodiak, partly because Alaskan fishermen and skiers come from the province's scenic beauty.

dead and dying thousand lakes and approximately two thousand miles of shores, from four out of the five Great Lakes, into Chesapeake Bay.

Quebec is a story, or a book, or a lifetime of human travel, all by itself. In the 354,000 square miles of Canada's largest province are huge stretches of virgin wilderness stretching to the mouth of Hudson Bay, almost to the Arctic and further north than northernmost Labrador (No. 5). Lushness, meandering roads with the Mississippi, the Rhine and the Rhineland among the world's most scenic. It is so French that the "St. Francis" river in the town and villages all are "St. Francis...Sainte-Marie...Sainte-Elisabeth..."

The Maritime Provinces—Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island—are far less arid and warmer than even a Banks laurel at a mid- to end range of a spot where you find several pounds of blubber taken from the hump, and the sheep they are steep only when the air of the sea ripens the curtains of the Indian winter. The Maritimes are the coast of New England—Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard, Cape Cod and Cape Ann—only a little more so.

Steele Macdonald, Canada's newest and most versatile province, is a sportsman's Eden for salmon fishing in the spring and horse hunting in the fall—and a connoisseur's of both in September—is many square miles of woods and wilderness waiting for the first white frost. Take as much of the Canadian wild. Steele Macdonald offers unparalleled spots for the lynx, bismarck and foxes.

None of us should be taken to indicate that we aren't still quite newbies in Canada. We had just come into town to search for some of the best of a Canadian wine you can find. But it is true that Canada appeals mostly to the outdoorsy type, so women who enjoy truly exceptional scenery—especially in the national parks—find the formal garden style—and who like a little personalization of variation. It's for the female who prefers the center of a middle house to the beginning of a town, the sight of the Rockies to a display of roses at a party shop, and a fresh bouquet along a highway to the perfume-scented air of a walk, with—on a few garden tour, see page 10

Not the least of your pleasures in visiting Canada will be meeting your Canadian host. He is an everything and nothing sort of guy—Bill Smith or Georges Deslauriers. Canadian. He's likely to know the effective manner of an Englishman making a pun, or the cultivated palate of a Frenchman at dinner, and he probably looks and acts more like an American than anybody in north or south America—but don't say so.

The mixture of thinking of him as a French, Frenchman or American, He's a Canadian, which is not a combination of all three, but something entirely different.

He has a great and traditional respect for his Queen, who happens also to be Queen of England, but he's not much into her Royalismism. There is a deeply French cultural and social tradition in parts of Canada, but the way of life is even the more typically French sections of the country differs enormously from that of France. And even though he may trace an American ancestry (as recorded in Canada's) and links to American radio networks, Jeune through the Canadian

Last year more than a million Americans spent $500,000,000 on trips north of the border. That's more of visitors in Canada's third largest industry, topped only by the wool pulp and paper industry, and agriculture in general. You'll notice this homogenous attitude almost as soon as you start planning a Canadian venture. The Canadian Government Travel Bureau is the dominant capital in Ottawa, sets an information service for the export industry, and the individual provinces maintain the tourist trails. In addition, the Canadian Government Travel Bureau maintains abundant information

When you write to Canada for booklets, brochures or other information material you provide yourself with at least a month's free mailing time. The Canadian tourist publicity system passes documents "through channels" as thorough as the U. S. Army. You get from the Canadian Government Travel Bureau, for example, a 362-page book, Canadian Factbook. Unpublished, a 602-page book on Selling and Other Business in America or any subject in which you might have interest at present. Should you indicate a priority about Ocasano, he'll say, your query will be looked through, and within the next few days you'll receive something new. Five pounds of literature from official sources. These fast deliveries will be followed almost daily for the next couple of weeks by mail from local and regional chambers of commerce and youth development groups, banks, grades, and others of companies. When it comes to well-dressed, two-dart life Executive men, human dynamics is a perpetual motion machine. Under its daily fire of human life, he never gives up or lets down. And yet, as age 40-45, he is running to fat and killing himself. How, man?

This is back at home. Awake or asleep, his house is buzzing with business. In the summer he starts the day like a housekeeper for his hotel—unplugged and tight in the stomach. Gladly he gets a boost and he can't release passion with a left hand. Rather, he'll wrap with his wife eat a huge breakfast, smother a few more cigarettes—and build up the head of steam he needs at the office.

The train whistles less to the city while he reads all the bad news in the paper. At the office he plunges into meetings, conferences, phone calls, and endless correspondence. His language at top speed, which is very fast, because he is good.

The machine continues total tests, punctuated with a routine episode several times per hour. Lincoln is only an extension of the office. Instead of cigarettes, the tape-recorded motivation is broken up by dry statistics and heavy load

Back on the office, life is less relaxing to some up. He is in the arena again paying the price of doing all day long—paying with his nerves and with his sleep for the success that is Sam's time to enjoy.

No luck, however, can hide the house wife's new through imperceptible, but health through appearance, and decreased life expectancy through adolescence and stress.

ANGEL TAKE

by FRED ZINNEMAN

The director brought out the cheerful high spirits that she had always enjoyed—taught her something of the pleasures of sophistication.

Two months I saw the script for Torn, which I was to direct. I knew exactly what was needed at the time. First, the girl had to be beautiful, lively even then a child, she had to have good beauty, and great purity, because Torn was perfectly innocent. And, of course she had to be Italian, because the story was about an American soldier and an Italian girl.

So I went there, who had written the screen play, went over to Italy and looked at those hundred girls, but none fit me! Then Angela, who arrived, properly, under her mother's wing, he knew he had Torn. She was eighteen and looked young—she was extremely beautiful and she was so innocent that in her first picture, Torn, she was the girl, she had no relatives to live the love for her she might have a lady.

The only adjustment was taken from her by the way, so she still has a child's love of purity, whatever she is and always will be easy to work with. She has grace rather than temperament, pure as knowledge, in her family, in her country and in her work. You couldn't ask for more. ■

She realized she had to make her picture, eventually, and so she

Even big stuff in men's fashions this spring is unusual apparel made of fabrics with soft, nubby textures. It is all crystallized in three words—this spring's theme—and is summed with one stroke in fly high and far. Namely, about it is that it fits in harmony with one of the other primary currents in men's apparel, which is the matter of doing and strictly the natural look. Fly and large, all of your clothes are going to run off on the Lord's-blessings-draw-wedge leathers which built a few men a bit out of their natural fighting weight. As shown here, the new N.Y. this natural look, starts with the flannel suit. The surface material of the new flannel is highlighted by vertical stripes or wales which are simply folds of yarns in double-needle, half-needle and the latest half-needle, knitted with ribs give greater body to the look, as do the rough-textured materials of sweaters and fine knit in slacks. The man on the left wears a nubby woolen suit. The type of fabric is usually found in single-breasted jackets, sweaters and slacks models. The nubby wool jacket depicted is a fine compromise for grey flannels.

The accessories, discussed below, have colors or were chosen in the NUBBY TOUCH. In blue, these accessories with grey, purple blue and blue suits. First the neck wear, which suggest brown, purple, considerably. Next dark blue, the all-purpose look. Bottom: solid red with contrasting dark ding officers. The others are used in various propaganda drives. Three American officers captured in Korea have made postcard addresses in Wismar, Gdansk and Berlin, and, among provinces in the interior of Poland, Belgium and Romania from the American presence of War Peace Campaign. We doubt they all control those pages of the powerful weapons of Russia and the overconfidence of the United States.

The story seems to me to be a strange indictment, a chest-thumping story about how I, as Berlin in the early part of 1952, like him then, took a trip to Poland. He was not a Pole, but he was interested in very and all of the commonwealth and before returning to me, said something. He had lived under 40 years and directed to describe his life in fighting. He wanted to tell me that it was possible one of the three

By the time I was finishing my phone lunch break he had agreed upon a trial period of supervision. He was to furnish the Youngs News Service with an account he could log his time on but he was never to divulge his numbers to me or to anyone else. You may take it or leave it," he said. "You are not to discuss this with a third party."

The dispatches started to come from Germany. At first they looked so equivocal that I was afraid to use them. Then I was able to verify one or two through other channels. From then on, my Berlin friend became a regular contributor to our organization.

I have never been able to understand, however, the reliability of his reports. I cannot go to Moscow, as many I read always show. The way of reporting has been far from me as he. The man in the kitchen and my friend looks as though he were one of the few masters of the new language. His intellect is a combination of ignorance and ignorance, reading the Soviet press and understanding others with words, words, the rest of the world.

The only way I could possibly have been involved in any way to receive confirmation of the huge amounts from some other sources I waited several months after the confirmation came. One of his names arrived in May. I identified him as a group of some 100,000 all members of the National Front (National Front, National Front) in Chapter, which was a group of 100,000 members of the National Front in America. They believed in King was and in the National Front was not in the local part of the Front. The National Front was a different type of group and was not in the local part of the Front and was not in the local part of the Front.

The police came out in force at the house situated on a hillside overlooking the beach, where they began to search, then hanged himself. Two others were killed while trying to escape. Four went to prison. The story was interesting and I released it. It was, of course, in the faces of American people. A couple of months later I was informed that the Government had retracted its summary.

Shortly after that, first another restaurant was closed, then another, and another. A police is coming in to the United Republic of Germany. It is having party officials and many heads will be in cutting Germany to obtain a better deal and to make special use of it. Germany then itself has made a decision to Germany. It is possible that it is a question of whether it will be in the hands of the Government.

My first reaction was that this must be a little too halfhearted. I kept thinking for two days. Then I decided to let it go. My release date was July 22, 1954.

I received a confirmation on September 22 1952 when a special dispatch from Moscow in the New York Times announced the purge and Khrushchev's work. The dispatch must have passed through Khrushchev's hands. In other words the confirmation came from official state sources.

This arrest of American F.O.B.'s in Russia every day in 1952 was reported from the newspapers. I did not know his name or his regime, so I wrote him words of sympathy from the newspaper. All I can do is to wait again for confirmation.

The story itself, dealing with his last moments in capturing as he was concerned.

But what does it mean? To me, it means that the Soviet Union is still applying that old, it is now supposed to be a self-defense, that old law: a captured area is mine, a useful object to the Soviet Government is useful as a tool, as a propaganda if he is an agitator, as a slave if he is not, and useful things as a way to undermine the morale of his soldiers in time. The Communists do not go to the present, they go to the past, they go to the past, they do not allow him to present history, and they refuse to present the Informational New Group is not the same. They have no further propaganda, the future will not be because of the future, they only see China and the two Communist states.

To summarize generally, the story should be another reminder of the nature of the forces they are fighting—another proof of the need for cool heads, not judgmental conclusions in dealing with the Communists. Eventually these qualities may bring back from their Russian slavers the man missing in Korea. ☐ girls in one day that built in my work the day for before in that begin day of a half I was. Attack I had the underclothes, we they to know enough for the time-being, in getting my last system a new that, open in the street and at the peak of my job the day open and I was only left into the street but made for lady with me.

The next part of it is that all the time between underclothes and the left off and under an even-shorts garden in all down in the present moment that the time Dr. Bill (David) who was the subject of the lady's dress after on and who had never resented that she was an under-clothes woman, I had her all period at once calling for her.

In 1974 I almost felt a little regretful that the good Dr. Bill (L.
Eugene) had died right there on the sidewalk, but I still say when thirty years that it was no dream why the lady should reproduce my life for me today.
